The first bill on the calendar was one returning to Charles Clinton, late assistant-treasurer at New York, the sum of five thousand eight hundred dollars, being the amount stolen from him in 1871, and refunded by himself to the United States. The bill was opposed by Messrs. Price, Cannon, Keifer and others, on the ground that it was not shown that due care had been taken in guarding the money from robbers, and was advocated by Messrs. Carlisle, Garfield, Tucker and others, who asserted that a reasonable degree of care had been observed, when an extended debate followed, confined principally to the question whether congress should act upon any such case as the one under dispaily to the question whether congress should act upon any such case as the one under discussion, or whether the principle should be established that no relief should be extended to any bonded officer of the government for losses sustained by him in the discarge of his official duty. Finally a vote was reached, and the committee refused, by 62 to 72, to report the bill favorably to the house.

The committee rose, and the house adjourned until Monday.

The Bill Abolishing Slavery in Cuba Discussed in the Spanish Chamber of Control Exercised over the Blacks by their Masters Does Not Amount to MADRID, January 16 - In the chamber o leputies to day the minister, replying to the argument of the opponents of the abolition oill, maintained that the exercise of a certain control by masters over the blacks did not amount to a perpetuation of their slavery. He deplored the abstention of some of the Caban deputies from participation in the session while the Caban questions are being discussed, and promised to grant liberty of the press to Cuba.

That the change in the cabinet does not indicate the abandonment of the prudent policy, which is the most suitable to the inter al affairs of France, but that it indicates that France may henceforth advance with decision in the path of necessary reforms and improvements. The government will apply itself to the realization of these reforms without precipitation or vaciliation, and it relies on the energetic support of the chambers. It says events have raised a certain number of questions, which cannot be left in suspense without injuring the interests of the country. For each one of these the government intends to bring forward a solution.
